

The new catalogue is now available!

The 2007 edition presents new products which have been developed following the new research program : Heat Stress Control. Inside a racing car temperature can exceed 70°C, humidity often reaches 60%, air flows are very limited and a driver can expend as much as 400 calories per hour (~1 hour of punching bag). Stand 21 became aware of this problem and has launched a specific research program with an international medical team. Since then, several racing incidents - during the last edition of Le Mans 24 Hours, for instance - have proven the usefulness of this research program and the need to find a solution.
